Thursday, 1 September 2011, 11h30-13h30

Work-care tensions: the impact of labour market transitions across generations and around family formation (WORKCARE SYNERGIES project)

Speakers:

Michaela Gstrein, Institute for Advances Studies (Vienna, AT)

Jacqueline O'Reilly and David Lain, University of Brighton (UK)

Comments: Janine Leschke, Senior Researcher ETUI

Moderator: Philippe Pochet, General Director ETUI

Briefing: The ETUI Monthly Forum will start with a brief presentation of the overall project WORKCARE SYNERGIES and an introduction on work-care tensions by Michaela Gstrein, the coordinator of the project. Following on that, the British team - Jacky O'Reilly and David Lain from the University of Brighton will elaborate on labour market transitions across generations, as well as around family formation. They will present research findings trying to answer to questions such as: what happens to people as they move between different employment statuses, do part-time and temporary workers remain in these jobs, do they move on to something better, or do they fall out of employment, and what factors and policies are associated with these transitions. WORKCARE SYNERGIES is a 7FP support action with the aim of disseminating research findings of previous EU Framework Programme projects in the field of work-care and initiating their discussion in a local context.
